One Killed, Six Injured In Local Weekend Accidents

NOAH STROUSE FATALLY HURT IN BARN FALL

Child Hurt When Struck By Auto On Route 23;
Cyclist Injured

One man was dead and six other persons were suffering from injuries, Monday, as a result of accidents over the weekend in the Circleville area.

Noah Strouse, 50, Salt Creek Valley farmer who had recently moved to Tarleton, died at 1:30 p. m. Saturday in White Cross hospital, Columbus, from injuries received at 10 a. m. Saturday in a 35-foot plunge to the floor of an empty hay mow. He had been working in the gable of the barn and lost his balance. Mr. Strouse was removed to the hospital in Defenbaugh's ambulance, Circleville. Mr. Strouse never regained consciousness.

He was born in Salt Creek township, the son of George Strouse and Ellen Waliser Strouse, and he was a member of the Trinity Lutheran church.

Mr. Strouse is survived by a son, Ned Allen Strouse, Salt Creek township, and several uncles and cousins, including Elmer Strouse, an uncle, and Clayton, Otis and Noel Waliser, cousins, all of Salt Creek township.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Tuesday in the Defenbaugh chapel, Circleville. Burial will be in Tarleton cemetery.

Ernest Hardman, 27, of 703 Jefferson street, Chillicothe, lost control of the motorcycle he was riding when the front wheel "shimmied" on U. S. Route 23 near the C and O. underpass south of Circleville at 4 p. m. Sunday. Hardman was hurled to the pavement and the cycle was wrecked in a ditch. Defenbaugh's ambulance, summoned from Circleville, removed the injured man to the Chillicothe hospital where Monday it was reported that he sustained a collar bone fracture and severe bruises and abrasions on his arms, legs, face and head.

Herbert Miller, 7, was recovering in his home, Route 1, Circleville, Monday, from numerous cuts and bruises sustained at 8 p. m. Saturday when he was struck by an automobile and knocked to the pavement of U. S. Route 23, four miles south of Circleville.

State Highway Patrolman L. G. Ridenour said the mishap occurred when the boy ran suddenly from the front yard of his home directly into the path of a southbound car operated by Forest Cockrell, 38, of 378 East Franklin street. The patrolman said Cockrell wrecked his automobile in a ditch in a futile attempt to avoid hitting the lad.

Cockrell's wife, Mildred, 39, suffered minor cuts and bruises when she was thrown against the windshield.

The Miller youngster was removed to Berger hospital by a passing motorist and, after being given first aid, the boy was taken home.

Two other victims of accidents, Sunday, were given emergency (Continued on Page Two)

Hughes Badly Hurt When Plane Crashes

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., July 8—Howard Hughes, multi-millionaire sportsman, was given a 50-50 chance to survive today after he crashed in his new Army photographic plane on its initial flight.

The handsome, 40-year-old airplane builder, who also found time to make movie queens of the late Jean Harlow and voluptuous Jane Russell, was testing his super-fast XF-11, which he designed and built for the Army.

Eight minutes after the takeoff last night, the plane apparently developed motor trouble and came down in the center of a swanky residential district. The plane struck two homes and plowed into a $100,000 mansion, setting off a series of fires and explosions that rocked the neighborhood.

Doctors at Good Samaritan hospital said Hughes was in "very critical condition." His injuries included a broken rib which pierced his left lung, a possible skull fracture, broken left collar bone, possible left leg fracture, a badly burned left hand, a broken nose and many cuts and bruises.

"He was conscious for hours after the crash," a hospital spokesman said, "and he appeared comfortable while we were taking X-rays."

Lana Turner, who Hollywood gossip insists will be Mrs. Hughes before too long, did not make an appearance at the hospital. Instead, her mother called Hughes' doctor to see how badly he was hurt.

When the shiny new plane, a twin-engine job with a knife-like wing, began to lose altitude, Hughes attempted to guide his ship to a nearby golf course. But one engine conked out and the other sputtering motor failed to make it.

Hughes, famed as a careful flier and a painstaking designer, had radioed the control tower minutes before the crash that he was having landing gear trouble. His next message said he was heading for the fairway of the Los Angeles Country Club.

He missed the course by several

BURGLARS USE STOLEN TRUCK

Truck Taken From Here Used
In Safe-Hauling Job
At Nelsonville

Thieves who stole a pickup truck from the garage of the Beckett Motor Sales, 122 East Franklin street, may be the same burglars who a few hours afterward removed a 500-pound safe from a garage at Nelsonville, it was declared following a conference Monday of Athens County Sheriff George Bateman, Pickaway County Sheriff Charles Radcliff, and Circleville Police Chief William F. McCready.

The truck was removed from the Beckett establishment early Saturday by thieves who forced a door to gain entrance. Later Saturday the truck was found abandoned on the Westfall road, three miles southwest of Circleville. A switch wire had been jerked loose, Sheriff Radcliff said, but otherwise the vehicle was undamaged.

About 100 yards from the truck the safe—minus the door—was discovered submerged in one foot of water in the old canal. The contents, including $432 in currency and checks, had been removed.

Sheriff Bateman said that sometime before daylight, Saturday, a truck was backed up to a door of Barber's Filling Station at the edge of Nelsonville, and the heavy iron safe was rolled onto the truck. Somewhere between the filling station and the canal where the strongbox was found the thieves, apparently using chisels and sledge hammers, had removed the door.

URGES LOAN APPROVAL

WASHINGTON, July 8—President Truman today urged the house to pass the senate-approved $3,750,000,000 British loan as "the one way we can avoid the danger of a conflict in economic policy between the United States and the United Kingdom."

REDS ROUND UP NON-AUSTRIANS IN NEW MOVE

Russians Order Foreigners
Out Of Austria; Allies
Protesting Action

VIENNA, July 8—A roundup of 54,000 non-Austrians in the Russian occupation zone of Austria began today with signs that the task had scarcely started by the deadline fixed in a Soviet order for their ouster.

The Russian occupation command announced yesterday that the foreigners in Austria, mostly "Volksdeutsche" or persons of German descent, customs or sympathy, were to be expelled by 6 a. m. today.

The Vienna railroad stations were almost deserted this morning, and no signs were apparent that a mass ejection from Austria was going on.

Government officials said they believed the roundup would be difficult, because many persons probably fled into hiding or into the other allied zones after the Soviet order was announced by radio yesterday.

A government spokesman said most of the persons affected were nationals of surrounding countries who speak German and whose sympathy apparently were with the Reich. Most of them entered Austria last year when they were ordered out of such countries as Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

The government was understood to have no objections to the general idea of moving out such persons. But it was disconcerted and displeased by the manner in which the Russians were going about it.

Officials said the overall figure included at least 6,000 persons (Continued on Page Two)

U. S. LOANED 4,200 VESSELS

3,390 Ships Went To Britain
Under Lend-Lease; Russia
Received 575

WASHINGTON, July 8—The United States transferred more than 4,200 naval vessels to other nations under lend-lease during the war.

They ranged from tiny torpedo boats to escort carriers.

Official government figures released today show that of the total, 3,390 naval vessels were lent-leased to Great Britain. Russia, a trailing second, received 575 vessels.

Other countries receiving naval ships from the U. S. were France, China, Netherlands, Brazil, Mexico, and other Central and South American nations.

Details were released to the United Press which more than three months ago requested a nation-by-nation breakdown of the number of ships lent-leased to other countries.

Government spokesmen stated that Russia without giving its reasons at first objected to revealing the totals. She later abandoned her stand, however, when all the other countries agreed to release the totals following inter-allied conferences.

Major vessels transferred to England included 37 carrier escorts, 78 destroyer escorts, 392 landing craft (infantry), and nine submarines.

Large units transferred to Russia included the 7,500-ton cruiser Milwaukee, three ice breakers, 88 submarine chasers, and a large number of smaller auxiliary craft.

WANT YANKS TO LEAVE CHINA

STUDENTS AND OTHERS who are advocating the end of civil war within China are shown on top of a railroad car near Shanghai as they set up a banner protesting the presence of U. S. Army forces in their country. The occasion for the demonstration was the departure for Nanking of a 12-man non-partisan peace delegation which will attempt to talk to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, U. S. General George C. Marshall and the Communist leader Chow En-lai. (International Soundphoto)

More Meat Due This Week But Prices Are Higher

Record livestock runs were reported in Midwest packing centers today, indicating that housewives would find more meat on the counters this week but would have to pay more for it.

More than four times as many cattle were driven into the pens of nine major middle western stockyards today than were there a week ago. The Chicago stockyards reported the highest cattle run since February, 1945.

Hog receipts showed an even higher rate of increase, over the figures of a week ago, but the flow of hogs to market had been at high level throughout the past week.

Chicago reported the largest cattle receipts of the nine yards, 22,000, all salable. A week ago, on the first Monday after the expiration of office of price administration controls, there were only 3,506.

Cattle receipts at the nine yards today totaled 83,000, compared with 19,500 a week ago, and 51,714 a year ago.

In Chicago, the big four packers remained conspicuously absent from the market. Most of the buying, even on scarce beef, was from eastern buyers.

Hog receipts at Chicago totaled 45,500, 9,500 above the expected run of about 16,000. In all nine yards they were 88,200, six times the 14,858 which were on the market a week ago, and more than twice the 39,110 which were offered a year ago.

Predictions on the amount of the price increases ranged from five (Continued on Page Two)

MOTHER CABRINI IS CANONIZED

U. S. Has First Citizen Among Saints Of Roman Catholic Church

VATICAN CITY, July 8—The United States had its first citizen among the saints of the Roman Catholic church today after the canonization of Mother Frances Xavier Cabrini in one of the most colorful ceremonies of the church.

Pope Pius XII pronounced Mother Cabrini a saint at the climax of four and a half hours of pageantry in St. Peter's basilica yesterday.

His holiness revealed that the feast day and day for the veneration of St. Frances Cabrini will be Dec. 22, the date of her death in Chicago in 1917.

May Claims He Got No Pay In Deal

WASHINGTON, July 8—Rep. Andrew J. May, D., Ky., recalls aiding the Illinois "paper empire" firms of Dr. Henry M. and Murray Garsson, but insists that he never made a cent out of the dealings.

May's side of the controversy was revealed when the senate war investigating committee released the text of his testimony made at a closed committee meeting June 4.

May, 71-year-old chairman of the house military affairs committee, requested that his testimony be made public to answer Army witnesses who have told the committee that May went beyond the "limits of propriety" in helping the Garsson firms get war contracts.

The committee is investigating profits of the 16-company network of Illinois firms, and planned to hear fresh testimony today about renegotiation of their war contracts.

The text of May's statements before the committee a month ago showed that he testified that:

1. "I may have called somebody for them (the Garssons) at some time for an engagement to see somebody with respect to some of (Continued on Page Two)

ARAB LEADERS BLAST TRUMAN

Statement Claims President
Made Palestine Life
More Difficult

JERUSALEM, July 8—Restive Palestine was put on the alert again today by an official Arab charge that President Truman had made "empty, irresponsible statements" regarding the situation in this country.

The Arab higher committee lashed out at Mr. Truman in the first official Arab retort to his statement that the United States desired the immediate admission of 100,000 more Jews to Palestine.

The committee said the President, if he were sincere in his solicitude for the welfare of the Jews, should begin his charity for them at home, admitting them to the United States.

Mr. Truman has made life in Palestine more difficult by his "empty, irresponsible statements," the higher committee said in a public statement. The President spoke in connection with the Anglo-American commission's recommendations for Palestine, including the admission of 100,000 Jews.

(Unconfirmed press reports reached London that the Arab higher committee was preparing a formal warning that 400,000 Arabs would oppose by force if necessary any attempt to send 100,000 Jews to Palestine. They said the warning was discussed at secret meeting of the committee.)

The British campaign described officially as designed to root out "terrorism and anarchy" in Palestine appeared to have reached the end of its military phase.

AMERICANS ARE BEING HELD BY SOVIET POLICE

BERLIN, July 8—Maj. Gen. Frank A. Keating, U. S. military governor in Berlin, disclosed today that an American warrant officer and his wife who have been missing eight days are being held prisoner by the Russians.

Two other American officers, a captain and a lieutenant, are also missing. Keating said. They were last seen July 4 boarding a train bound for Oranienburg, 20 miles north of Berlin, in the Soviet zone.

The missing Americans were warrant officer Samuel L. Harrison and his wife of Harrah, Okla., Capt. Harold Colbin, address unknown, and Lieut. George E. Wyatt, Oklahoma City.

Harrison was attached to the Berlin quartermaster depot, Colbin to the military government headquarters and Wyatt to the 252nd engineer combat battalion.

RUSSIAN BALKS IN FORMAL VOTE ON CONFERENCE

U. S., Britain, France Favor
Peace Conference But
Soviet Holds Out

MEETING HOPES FADE
Longer Delay May Postpone
Full-Dress Peace Confab
Set For July 29

PARIS, July 8—The big four foreign ministers today failed again in an attempt to break the one-man "filibuster" of foreign Minister V. M. Molotov who refuses to allow invitations for the 21-nation peace conference to be issued until rules of the meeting have been established.

After lengthy argument the ministers put the invitation question to a formal vote which showed Molotov holding out as a one man minority against Secretary of State James F. Byrnes, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Foreign Minister Georges Bidault.

The three western ministers wanted to send out the invitations immediately for the conference which they had agreed to hold July 29. But Molotov continued to block any action.

Hours of argument failed to develop any new approach to the problem but the ministers agreed to meet at 5 p. m. to tackle the matter again.

Byrnes presided at today's meeting and, in an effort to force Molotov's hand and place the responsibility for delaying the invitations, he called the roll of all four foreign ministers.

Turning to Bidault he said: "Are you in favor of sending out conference invitations at once?"

"Yes," Bidault replied. He put the question to Bevin who also agreed. Then he turned to Molotov who said he was not backing down on his demand.

Molotov renewed his argument, advanced Saturday, that to call the conference without setting up rules of procedure would turn the meeting into "a stamping machine." He called the stand of the western powers "an outrageous imposition of the American will on the peace conference."

Bidault, France's president, premier and big four delegate, was understood to be hopeful of untangling the snarl over whether the foreign ministers shall lay down ironclad rules for the full (Continued on Page Two)

MORE THAN 400 LOSE LIVES IN LONG HOLIDAY

By United Press
The nation returned to work today after a long holiday weekend in which more than 400 persons lost their lives.

Although late reports showed 417 deaths directly attributable to the four-day Fourth of July holiday, the toll was lower than previous years and considerably less than forecast by the National Safety Council.

Nearly half the deaths, caused by traffic accidents, were fatal. The toll was lower than previous years and considerably less than forecast by the National Safety Council.

A total of 203 persons were killed in automobile mishaps, 116 were drowned, eight died in fireworks explosions, and 90 died in miscellaneous accidents.

California led the states with 41 fatalities. Michigan was second with 36, and Ohio had 33. New York counted 24 holiday deaths, Texas 22, Illinois 21, and Pennsylvania 17.

The Safety council had reported that 450 persons would be killed in traffic accidents and 850 would die as a result of fireworks burns, drownings, falls and similar accidents. It predicted that 800 would be killed outright and another 800 would die later from injuries received during the four day holiday.

RUSSIAN BALKS IN FORMAL VOTE ON CONFERENCE

U. S., Britain, France Favor
Peace Conference But

dress European peace conference.
Time after time in the three weeks of the present big four meeting, Bidault has emerged in the role of compromiser able to reconcile the divergent views of the Soviets and Anglo-Americans. Talk in conference quarters over the week end was that he might pull another rabbit out of the diplomatic hat.
High sources close to the conference saw a possibility that unless a decision was reached speedily, the chance of holding the peace parley on the scheduled date was threatened. They agreed generally that two to three weeks would be necessary for the various delegations to make their arrangements to come here for the conference.

The impasse technically was based on Molotov's refusal to discuss the invitations to the conference until the rules for it had been laid down.
Some sources understood the Russians had become suspicious that Great Britain, the United States, or some smaller power might try to use the conference for the revision of big four decisions.

If and when the thorny problem is solved, the big four will proceed to approval of a draft by the deputies of the Italian reparations decisions and then to the German question. When the latter is reached, Molotov will present a mysterious declaration he mentioned Friday without giving a hint about its contents.

But so far no indication had been seen that either Russia or the Anglo-Americans were ready to yield on whether the council should dictate to the other peace conference nations how they should operate.

Byrnes and Bevin were believed to be willing to compromise to the extent of the big four "suggesting" to the conference how it should operate. The Americans, British, and to a lesser extent the cautious French, have sought to avoid the danger that the peace conference would become a rubber stamp.

Some of the Russians talked hopefully of being able to go home by the middle of this week. Some other quarters thought the conference probably would draw to a close by the end of the week.

More Meat Due This Week But Prices Are Higher

to 14 cents per pound. Reports from some larger cattle cities showed some butchers already had boosted prices from 10 to 20 cents.

Although it generally was agreed that the expiration of price controls one week ago had increased the flow of meat, distribution was still spotty, and industry spokesmen said it would be near the end of the week before fresh meat reached all sections of the country.

F. E. Mollin, executive secretary of the American National Livestock Association, said there would be a plentiful supply of meats unless OPA ceilings were restored. He said prices would "level off" somewhere between the fictitious OPA ceilings, at which only a small amount of meat moved, and the black market prices.

Mollin said fresh pork would reach the market first because it takes relatively little time to process. Beef, with a period of aging required, will take somewhat longer, he said. Hams and bacon will take still longer because of the processing involved.

Meanwhile, rents and other prices continued to climb, but at a much slower rate, presumably because of the uncertainty over possible resurrection of price controls. A new OPA extension bill was being debated in the senate and majority leader Alben Barkley said he hoped to be able to send the measure to President Truman by the end of the week.

Opposition senators led by Republicans Robert A. Taft of Ohio and Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, fought to exempt meat, poultry and dairy products from the bill, however.

Prompted by reports of widespread increases since the death of OPA, additional cities and states moved to initiate some form of rent control. Gov. Ralph Gates of Indiana said he would reinstate rent control if congress took no action this month.

At St. Paul, Minn., Gov. Edward J. Thye said he would call a special session of the legislature July 22 to enact a state rent control bill.

At Omaha, the Building Owners and Managers association formed a special committee to aid tenants in difficulties and urged landlords to hold price lines. Two protest meetings were scheduled in Chicago.

As the meat shortage eased, a Chicago packing house official said removal of government subsidies—which went out with the OPA—would cost consumers an extra five cents a pound.

George Dressler, executive secretary of the National Association of Meat Dealers, predicted that meat ceilings generally would average seven to 14 cents a pound more.

At St. Louis, 15 high school students conducted one of the first successful buyers' strikes. When the proprietor of a neighborhood confectionary store boosted the price of soda pop from five to 10 cents, teen-agers staged a boycott. The price promptly dropped back to the old five-cent level.

BISHOP SCORES ADVOCATES OF WAR ON 'REDS'

COLUMBUS, O., July 8—Those religious leaders who sound the cry for a "holy war against Communism" today are the same ones who tolerated and even actively supported Spanish, German and Italian wars.

This was the charge made here yesterday by Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, president of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Bishop Oxnam spoke at a Methodist bishops conference which closed yesterday after a four-day meeting.

palatial mansion of Lt. Col. Charles Meyer, No. 1 interpreter at the war crime trials in Germany. Mrs. Meyer, alone in the house, escaped injury.

The crash split the house in two, and flames which licked up seconds later burned it completely. The wing assembly of the XF-11 was flung onto the front lawn, and the tail assembly at the rear and the motors scattered in pieces.

Sgt. William Lloyd Durkin, on pass from El Toro Marine base, rushed in and dragged Hughes from the burning ship. He was aided by Capt. James Guston, 22-year-old son of Costa Guston, retired Swedish industrialist and owner of the second house hit by the plummeting plane.

The XF-11, which Hughes built in cooperation with the Army's air materiel command, had a wing span of 101 feet, four inches, and was 65 feet, five inches long. It had a speed in excess of 400 miles an hour.

Hughes, who has built up his fortune to an estimated $125,000,000 is perhaps the most famous civilian flyer alive today. He miraculously escaped death three years ago when an amphibian plane he was piloting crashed into Lake Meade, Nev.

All Hughes-designed planes make their maiden flights with him at the controls. His first plane was built in 1935, and in it he set a transcontinental speed record of nine hours 27 minutes and 10 seconds from Los Angeles to New York.

Three years later, he zoomed around the world in the record-breaking time of 91 hours, 14 minutes.

whose status was doubtful. Among them were Austrian wives, some now divorced, of Germans in Austria.

The Soviet order of expulsion was made public only a few hours before the deadline at 6 a. m. today. It was the second decree within two days affecting the basic life and economy of Austria in the Red Army occupation zone. The first was for the Russian seizure of all former German property in eastern Austria.

The three western allies protested to the Russians against the form of arbitrary repatriation involved in the order for the mass eviction.

Competent observers here regarded the new Soviet order as a companion piece to the Saturday decree on the seizure of former German property. The two were believed to be interlocking, with each to some extent dependent on the other.

Chancellor Leopold Figl of Austria said the order probably would cause the removal of the last reserve of manpower for the coming harvest.

He said the move undoubtedly was part of a pressure campaign aimed at forcing the Austrian government to sign agreements sanctioning the inroads the Russians were making on Austrian economy.

2. He was appointed process agent for the Cumberland lumber company, one of the "empire" firms, and was the only person authorized to draw on its bank account.

3. He never had any financial interest in the company, never made any profit out of it and that all checks drawn on the account "were entirely disbursed in the business of the company."

4. The company kept no books except bank statements and canceled checks.

5. His son and nephew were on the lumber company's payroll, and that a $600 check made out to his son was for funds "that he would disburse on the job."

6. He attended a $16,000 banquet given by the Garssons, but only "as an observer to see what inducements they were giving to the veterans they had employed; they were putting on a considerable show about their veterans that they had hired, regardless of certain restrictions that somebody in the government had put on it some way."

May related that he got "messed into this lumber business" after Joseph Freeman—Washington representative for the Garssons—told him he had been told that perhaps May could help him buy some lumber.

May said he then obtained an option on the Cumberland timberlands, "and turned it over to Freeman and Garsson," who bought the land. May said he made no money from the deal, but he thought that L. W. Fields, an attorney and a constituent, got a commission on sale of the land.

Priests, children, American soldiers and high personages in civilian life rushed eagerly to gather the mementos.

The ceremony rich in pomp and pageantry opened when the members of the holy congregation of rites and other prelates, together with all the cardinals in Rome, convened in a hall close to the Sixtine chapel and formed a procession.

Mother Cabrini was born at Sant'Angelo di Lodi, Italy, July 15, 1850, the youngest of 13 sisters. At the age of 39 she landed for the first time in New York to begin the work for which she was canonized.

She founded the order of the Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

SKATE TRAVELS ON OWN POWER DESPITE BLAST

Submarine, Badly Damaged On Outside, Still Goes Blandy Learns

OFF BIKINI ATOLL, July 8—The submarine Skate thumbed its nose today at the atomic bomb—and the public.

From all outward appearances a total wreck after the atomic blast a week ago, the Skate came back and proceeded under her own power past the USS Mt. McKinley, Operation Crossroads flagship.

Vice Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, boss of the atom test project, boarded the Skate to see what was keeping her afloat. She had taken the atomic blow estimated at 500 pounds per square inch and had been so thoroughly mangled topsides that she was ordered beached lest she sink.

But not even the atom bomb's unimaginable power had been able to blast the heavy hull which permits submarines of the Skate's class to submerge hundreds of feet.

"Inside of her," Blandy said, "you'd never know there had been an atomic bomb blast."

He added that Lt. Cmdr. E. P. Huey, of Cisco, Tex., the Skate's skipper, and his crew were so proud of their vessel that they wanted to sail her back to the United States without repairs.

But the Skate has still to go through test Baker, the shallow underwater atomic burst scheduled for July 25. This second test is expected to inflict much more damage against hulls than the Able day air drop.

The Skate had a 10-foot long dent in her conning tower, but Blandy refused to give the bomb credit for it. He said he thought "something heavy hit her"—perhaps an airplane engine from the Nevada.

Blandy is showing more respect daily for the Able day bomb which sank five ships and damaged all but a handful of the 73 target vessels in Bikini lagoon.

He said at least 68 and possibly 70 targets will be used for the second test. All survivors of the first test will be used, with the possible addition of one or two additional ships, he said.

The targets which suffered the greatest hull and interior damage will be placed farther from the bursting point in the second test Blandy said. The ships will be so arranged to insure the survival of a goodly number for test Charley—a deep underwater burst planned next Spring off Bikini.

Meanwhile, Cmdr. Roger Revelle, a Navy oceanographer, said that test Baker might blast a crater in the sea bottom 1000 feet across and 50 to 100 feet deep. He said the first test had absolutely no effect on the lagoon floor or the coral formation of Bikini atoll.

Berlyn Brixner, El Paso, Tex., a leading Los Alamos scientist, said that there will be "immense differences" between test Baker and the four previous atomic detonations. The most marked differ-

STASSEN HOPES AT STAKE TODAY IN MINNESOTA

MINNEAPOLIS, July 8—The presidential aspirations of Harold E. Stassen were at stake today in Minnesota's primary election.

The electorate voted to nominate Republican and Democratic-Farmer-Laborite candidates for U. S. senator, for nine congressional seats and for state offices.

Stassen, is not a candidate for any office, but his prestige depends upon the outcome of the Republican race for the senatorial nomination.

There are five men in the race for the nomination, but the real decision will be made between Sen. Henrik Shipstead and Gov. Edward J. Thye, Stassen's man. The GOP nominee for senator is considered a sure thing in the Fall general election in this Republican stronghold. The issues between Shipstead and Thye are clearly drawn.

Shipstead has proclaimed himself for isolationism. Thye, selected by Stassen as his successor when Stassen joined the Navy, strongly endorses the United Nations and international cooperation.

A defeat for Thye would be a blow to Stassen.

Both Shipstead and Thye are two of the best vote-getters ever to run for office in Minnesota. In 1944, Thye received the largest vote and the largest majority ever cast for governor. Shipstead, elected to the senate three times by the Farmer-Labor party and once by the Republicans, has been in office since 1922.

ence, he said, will be the "immense amount of water which will go up into the air and return to the surface." He added that scientists expected an atomic cloud but not one similar to those observed at New Mexico, Hiroshima, Nagasaki and Bikini.

LADINO CLOVER GROWING FAST

New Pasture Crop Yields Well On Briggs Farm; Stock Like It

Ladino clover, one of the best of the newer pasture crops, is growing luxuriously on the Harry Briggs farm, operated by Don Reed, two miles south and a mile east of Atlanta.

Mr. Briggs states that his Ladino was sown in the Spring a year ago, hence this is its first year in production. Exact measurement of the crop performance isn't possible since the three acres of Ladino sown with alfalfa, are part of a field, the balance of which grows alfalfa and clover.

Mr. Briggs stated at his farm that 30 cattle and 110 hogs have grazed the entire field since early Spring and that the Ladino acres were given preference by the livestock. In addition to the pasture afforded by the Ladino-alfalfa mixture, nine loads of fine hay are reported to have been harvested this year, amounting to an estimated six tons, or two tons cured hay per acre plus grazing.

Excellent though the results are, they are not without equal that have been seen on other farms where Ladino clover has been given a chance, according to James A. Muster, soil conservationist, who explains that the Briggs demonstration is a part of the Pick-away Soil Conservation District plan prepared for the Briggs farm, which has operated under such a plan for about eight years. Mr. Briggs believes that he will also get fine results from the Bromegrass that he seeded this year for results in 1947 and thereafter.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS
By PAUL MALLON

NOTRE DAME, Ind., July 8 — Out here where the football teams come from, I found the American counterpart of the playing fields of Eton from which the traditions have sprung which have held the British empire together for centuries in the face of many enemies. The playing fields of Notre Dame have grown 102 years old with the fresh growing spirit of a new nation now stepping into world leadership. You may feel it within you, pulsing with potentialities of a new hundred years, springing like the tall shade trees from the green grass, the two lakes on the large flat prairie campus, the most beautiful as a whole which I have seen from coast to coast. Upon it you may see further than the buildings of learning to the modern brick stadium in which a football spectator may see a game better than any other, (the sidelines of its theatre are nearly in the stands) and the press box is glass-enclosed and steam heated. Or you may see the Rockne field house, or the large golf course adjoining the buildings. For while other large universities have grown in cities where the law of nature required them to skip a block or two for the next building, and thus sprawl through town, Notre Dame has acres yet unused, a compact campus, and as I say, probably our most beautiful naturally. Like Eton, its ratio of casualties during the war was highest (men joined the air forces early) and like Eton many a father now may reserve entry for his son in infancy.

Does this give you the inspiration of its influence—the joining of what is new with what is old in education to furnish the spirit which is common to all this nation and its many campuses? In this atmosphere is not where you meet juvenile delinquency. It is the exception rather than the rule. Here you may see Budenz, editor from the Communist Daily Worker in New York who is finding the new way of life (his book will be out in the Fall), the philosophers of America and those fled from Europe, educators, students now grown two years older in their graduation to their degrees and the naval reserve commissions, and alumni from my day when it was a small college and Rockne coached the team of farmers' and villagers' sons from this growing area in a barely-fenced field well enough to beat Army with such frequency as to bring their annual game to the Yankee stadium. Football is still a game here, but it has grown as the country has into, each year, an ever new era with its yearning to excel, do duty and perpetuate its fair and common justice.

My trip into these surroundings climaxed a two weeks journey around the country in which I attended three commencements (receiving three honorary degrees of doctors of laws and letters) and saw the younger generation. There is nothing the matter with it, if you raise it right. Healthy, earnest, eager for peace and to work for it, this coming generation of higher learning (from which leadership comes), wore its battle and service stripes well. It looked good enough to me. Its problems are greater and somewhat confused. But principles do not grow larger or smaller.

Educators out around the country (not here because the school lives on a campus outside South Bend), told me of the usual difficulties of our age and a new one. Inside the youngsters some authorities seemed to have detected the presence in varying degrees of what might be called an undefinable resentment. It was not personal, but you might say it was against society, perhaps against authority, even governments. It lacked a precise definition, but (Continued on Page Six)

YOU MUST THROW HIM IN THERE IS only one possible course of action for you if a defender holds the K-Q and another trump, or the Q-J and two others, to the left of the remaining honors in the suit, and you want to limit him to one trick in the suit. You must throw him into the lead and make him pitch back into your tenace. In order to do that, you must first play in each other suit a number of tricks equal to the number of his cards in it. By so doing, you pare down the hands so that he has no alternative but a lead which helps you.

Knowing that three kings were out against him, South realized he had quite a job on his hands, and when he saw the dummy he felt worse still to note also what trumps were missing, undoubtedly bunched with West. But then light began to shine. The opening lead of the club 4 assured his losing no tricks in that suit, and the location of the red aces made it pretty likely he could catch those kings. If he could only estimate West's distribution in the side suits, he might make that contract by a throw-in.

Winning the opener with the club 4, he laid down the spade A to find the trump situation as he expected. Then he decided to play West for three cards in each side suit. He scored the club A, finessed the heart J, led the 10 to the K and A took in the heart Q, ruffed the club 8 with the spade 4, finessed the diamond Q, cashed the diamond A, ruffed the diamond 10 with the spade 8, and now was down to just three trumps, the K-10-9, while West retained the Q-J-5.

Knowing success was now certain, he led the spade 9. West got it with the J, then had to lead back into the K-10 from his Q-5, giving South the last two tricks.

Granulated Lids—An Eye Condition of Several Types

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE best is none too good when it comes to the care of the eyes. Infinitely valuable as the source of vision, they are also vastly important to the appearance. The person who must constantly squint against the light or whose eyes are habitually sore, swollen or inflamed, is at a definite disadvantage.

Granulated lids, called blepharitis by the doctor, is not ordinarily considered a serious trouble, but it can cause much discomfort, both mental and physical, particularly if the condition becomes prolonged or chronic.

Varied Sources

Recent work done by Dr. Phillip Thygeson of the Medical Corps of the A.U.S. in tracking down the varied sources of this trouble may prove to be an important aid to quick and effective treatment.

In one type of this condition, there may be redness of the lid edges with the formation of greasy scales. In another type, small swellings develop at the roots of the lashes and pus may form in these swellings. When these open and drain, ulcers usually form.

Frequently, there is also inflammation of the eyelid's lining membrane and even of the front part of the eyeball itself. It is then necessary for the doctor to determine what germ is causing the trouble and to institute the proper treatment.

Common Amongst Soldiers
Dr. Thygeson found blepharitis to be the most common external inflammation of the eyes among soldiers. It is an important cause of disability, producing such symptoms as burning, smarting, itching, pain when looking at light, and watering of the eyes. Certain complications may develop such as the formation of sties, chronic inflammation of the lining of the eyeball and ulcers on the cornea, which is the dark portion of the eyeball.

Furthermore, the inside scaling and redness interfere with the appearance of the affected person, and lower his morale, even though it isn't infectious or contagious to others.

Dr. Thygeson discovered three types of blepharitis. One group is due to seborrheic dermatitis, another to staphylococcus germs, and the third to a germ known as the Morax-Axenfeld bacillus. In the seborrheic type there is always seborrhea of the scalp, that is, the formation of yellow, greasy scales in the hair. Furthermore, the condition also affects the ears and the eyebrows in many instances. There are greasy scales on the eyelids, but the symptoms are not severe.

In the staphylococcal type, ulcers frequently form and the scales are hard and difficult to remove.

In the Morax-Axenfeld type, the disturbance is most severe in the corners of the eyes.

Of course, the treatment will depend on the type of condition present, and careful examination by a physician will be required to determine the exact type of treatment necessary to effect a cure.

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

"WHAT DID IT?" the ensign inquired. "Ice on the rails?"

"Naw." The trackwalker's voice dropped, became confidential. "A wheel come off."

Corbett began: "There was a Nazi. Prisoner of war—"

"I saw him on the train," Stengel cut in eagerly. "With two F. B. L. He spoke with a strange kind of pride—both he and the trackwalker did—as if being eyewitnesses, being part of this horror, was something that set you above the rest of mankind."

The trackwalker's voice preened itself. "I seen him come off. First thing. To the clinic."

The ensign asked diffidently: "Do you suppose—could those Germans have done it—for HIM?"

Stengel's jaw came up sharply. "You mean sabotage?"

"Naw." The trackwalker shook his head sagely. "They don't need a do. Rolling stock's shot. That's what it is. Shot to the devil."

They slid the stretcher next to the cook. "Plasma," Stengel said to the nurse with his air of importance. "The Doc says give him plasma before you get started."

The form on the sloping platform was tiny this time and the white-thatched man had to stand on his tip-toes to stroke its cheeks. When they lifted the battered old woman down to the stretcher, they saw that his bloody, bruised face was stamped with the imprints of heels.

The interne moved around to Stengel's side as though he were the man best equipped to hear the man best equipped to hear the bad news. "Put her in the ambulance anyway," he whispered. "Let him go along. She's finished. Nothing they can do for her any more, but I'd rather he didn't find that out up here. We've got plenty without him caving in."

The old man plodded after them through the crowd and down the slope, anxiously twittering. "Carry her easy . . . Do you want me to help you? . . . She's not much of a load. Weighs 95 pounds. She's so tiny. Eats like a bird. They'll give her good care in the hospital? They'll get her good doctors, won't they? . . . She's just stunned, isn't she? . . . She'll be all right? Won't she be all right? . . . She'll be a good patient. Never complains . . . See how quiet she is . . ."

When they came back with an empty, the steward called down from the platform: "No more in here. We got 'em all out. Pick up that guy on the tracks. Cripes, you can't leave a dead man out in the rain."

"About time," the trackwalker said. "I seen him get killed. Before the juice was turned off."

"Poor guy must have been in a rush," Stengel said.

"They seen he was dead," the trackwalker said. "They said leave him lay. Get out the living ones first."

The face of the corpse drowned in a black pool of water. His torso lay on the track, arms flung up. His shoes were toward them, black and white uppers, worn-down heels, round, ragged scars on the soles. Rain plastered his shoes, the glistening black hair, gray-salted, looked familiar. Before they had turned and had lifted the man, Corbett knew it was Kaichia. He felt a slight pang of pity. It was, after all, someone he knew.

When the ensign and trackwalker seized Kaichia's arms to raise the body, the cable moved with it. The fingers of one hand were coiled, were drawn, stiffened, around the loose end of a broken high tension wire. There were charred holes in the knees of the trousers and the legs that had lain on steel rails were burned.

As they turned him, a shower of tinkles fell from his pockets, splashed into the puddle. Corbett and Stengel stooped simultaneously and roweled the muck. They looked down at their hands and then at each other.

In Corbett's fist lay a chunk of white metal, melted around the dial of a watch, and pebbles, gray, lustreless, almost like coal chips, wadded together with wisps of black metal. Stengel held a half dozen squares of soggy, singed leather.

"Wheel!" The ensign gasped. "Imagine that heat! It burned up the stuff in his pocket."

"Put it back," the trackwalker said. "Don't let 'em say we robbed the dead."

"He robbed the living," Corbett said grimly. He took the leather squares from Stengel's hand, pried one open. The name was unfamiliar but it wasn't Kaichia. He opened another. Under a glassine strip he made out the blurred letters of Amos C. Peck. He opened a third, a fat billfold of brown. He saw Voorhees' name.

The ensign looked bewildered. "He robbed 'em? Now? In the wreck?"

"During the night," Corbett said. "He robbed the bertha." He saw Stengel glance at him, eyes suspiciously narrowing, heard the man ask: "How'd you know?"

He answered impatiently. "I saw some of those things on the people that owned them. You won't find HIS name in those wallets."

"What's his name?"

"Benny Kaichia."

"Is that so?" He was aware that Stengel didn't quite trust him. The man was dipping the wet billfold covers and glancing at him out of the corners of his eyes.

"I saw how he acted," Corbett began to explain. "He had the seat next to mine in the coach."

"In the coach? In what coach?" The trackwalker looked toward the tower.

"Holy cow! Your seat was in Sixteen!" The trackwalker took off his cap, held it up to his chest in the reverent posture of men in the presence of death. "Say your prayers. Get down and pray."

Corbett's tense fingers bunched the man's sweater. "All killed in that coach?"

The man pulled away. "Wheel come off Sixteen. Fifteen and Sixteen they got it worst."

Corbett's hand opened slowly, releasing the sweater. The ensign shuffled his feet. "Whatever he is, we can't let him lie in the rain."

"Let who lie?" Corbett stared at the rain-sashed corpse on the cinder. He couldn't remember what had happened a half minute before. Without saying one word to the three who were with him, he turned and raced toward the slanting steel tower. He passed a blur of white faces, bug-eyed, streaming with rain. Glass cracked under his shoes.

In two giant pils, hugging the base of the tower, lay twisted scrap iron, broken valves, spilling out clothes, squashed golden oranges and peaches. The rubble heaped screamed, moaned and whimpered, cursed and prayed. His futile fingers clawed at the pile directly back of the diner.

Someone touched his arm. "Sorry, soldier. Got to wait for equipment to get this stuff off."

The priest with the dripping black hat moved up to him, put an arm across his shoulder. "Have you some one in there?"

"There's a woman and baby . . ."

The priest's arm tightened around him. "Can you give us a description?"

He tried to remember what Joanne's mother looked like and finally said: "She was young. Just a kid. Long brown bob. She wore a red coat."

"How old was the baby?"

He frowned. Why were they asking all this? "The baby?" He could hear her voice at the depot and he spoke with her words: "You wouldn't believe he was only nine months. He looked like a year and a half . . . big, fat baby. Blonde hair. Kewpie doll."

From the way he talked, intimately, with affection, they were sure it was him. He watched the priest trading commiserating glances with the man who first had addressed him, saw the first signal the man to leave Corbett to him.

"Son, you are a soldier. You know what it means to be brave. God takes other men loves . . ."

The other man—he was a passenger, you could tell by his clothes and his tan—said: "Take it easy, soldier. We got them both."

He breathed: "And?" He wrenched himself free of the priest's arm, looked into the passenger's face. The man shook his head. "I know it's a tough one to take. Your wife and your kid?"

"They're not mine. They're people I knew. People I met on this journey."

"Oh!" Relief was plain on their faces. Now they could tell him without wasting time or emotion. "Flung clear," the man said. "Through the window. The girl had the baby. Hung on to it tight. They thought the kid might be saved. It died on the stretcher."

At the rim of the huddle, a new voice asked: "You don't mean the boy?"

"I don't mean him. He might be all right. You can live with only one arm. Cripes, did you see how that glass cut that clean? Like a knife."

Inside WASHINGTON

Circumventing That Soviet "Iron Curtain": Aid to Hungary May Be First Shrewd Move

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Diplomatic observers are following closely the United States battle to get around, over or through the so-called "Iron curtain" Russia is accused of drawing around her border countries. The first successful step was taken recently in regard to Hungary when it was agreed that $32,000,000 in Hungarian gold, looted by the Germans and recaptured by General Patton, be made available to the Hungarian government.

Whether United States aid to Hungary will help to persuade Romania, Bulgaria and Poland to incline more to the western democracies remains to be seen.

TOP GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS knew several days before the scheduled strike deadline that the recently-threatened maritime walkout of more than 200,000 CIO workers would not come off.

One of them held a secret pow-wow with Joseph Curran, burly, red-faced boss of the powerful CIO National Maritime Union, and received assurances that if the "economic" demands of the NMU members were taken care of there would be "no political strike."

That made it easy. The government, owner of most of the nation's merchant ships, announced put forward its own wage and hour offer which Curran accepted and the ship owners had to go along with.

Curran, government negotiator and CIO President Philip Murray then went to work putting the pressure on Harry Bridges, whose longshoremen were itching for a strike.

Bridges was bitter at the end of the maritime negotiations. His longshoremen were forced to take the recommendations of a federal fact-finding board made several weeks ago and got nothing out of the maritime negotiations in Washington.

THE MUCH-HERALDED SETTLEMENT of the dispute which led to the strike threat may be short lived.

One fact overlooked by the agreement is that Bridges' longshoremen have a contract which continues until Sept. 30, when their pact expires.

Another fact is that Bridges may touch off the fuse for another tie-up. Much depends, however, on how much power he can command in the CIO.

MEANWHILE, Allied merchant marine authorities are showing an unwillingness to abandon all global shipping controls despite the fact the shipping bottleneck admittedly is a thing of the past.

The international governing body which maintained a tight grip over the worldwide shipping pool during the war, assigning ships and cargo space to some 18 member nations, was scrapped several months ago.

But a so-called "consultative council," including bigwigs of the United States Maritime commission, stepped into its shoes as an ad interim agency because leaders feared that a sudden end to all regulations would bring chaos.

Abandoning Ship Controls Is Not Likely

Miss Howard Is Bride Of Lewis E. Bielstein

Relatives From City Attend Wedding In Columbus

Miss Mary Josephine Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Howard, Columbus, became the bride of Lewis E. Bielstein, son of Mrs. Frank Stelver, Columbus, Saturday morning in St. John's church, Ohio avenue, Columbus. The Rev. Father R. E. Burkhardt performed the double ring ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a gown fashioned with a tight fitting white lace bodice with long sleeves ending in a point over her hands. The full skirt of her bridal gown was of white tulle which ended in a train. A single strand of pearls was her only jewelry and she carried a white lace handkerchief which her father brought to his mother from France following the first World War. Mrs. John Riley, aunt of the bride, carried this same handkerchief at her own wedding 25 years ago. Falling from her halo of orange blossoms was a finger tip length veil and she wore a deep blue velvet ribbon around her neck which was centered with a saintly cameo. Miss Roberta Fox served as maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Sybilla Van Austin and Mrs. Richard Estell, all of Columbus.

John N. Howard, brother of the bride, served as best man for Mr. Bielstein. Seating the guests were Richard Crumm and Raymond Morris, Columbus.

The church was decorated throughout with baskets of mixed white flowers and palms. The family pews were marked off with white satin ribbon gathered with clusters of smiles.

During the ceremony John Austin sang several selections including "Ave Maria." At the Communion "Oh Lord I Am Not Worthy" and "On This Day Oh Beautiful Mother." Traditional wedding music was played by the organist.

Following the marriage a wedding breakfast was served to 35 relatives and close friends at the Southern hotel. Guests were seated at a large U shaped table centered with a large wedding cake topped by a miniature bride and groom and surrounded by bouquets of white gladioli, snapdragons and roses.

The bride's mother greeted her guests in an aqua crepe dress with pink accessories and a corsage of pink shattered carnations.

Mrs. Stelver, mother of the bridegroom wore a light blue crepe dress with white accessories and her flowers too were pink shattered carnations.

When the new Mr. and Mrs. Bielstein left for a wedding trip to New York and Washington D. C. the bride was dressed in a pink eyelet dress with a short blue jacket with white accessories. Pinned to her shoulder were the gardenias from her bridal bouquet.

Mr. Howard, father of the bride was formerly of this city.

Mrs. Bielstein was graduated from East High school, and is at present associated with the Bank of Ohio, Columbus.

Mr. Bielstein is also a graduate of East High school and recently received his discharge from the Army Air Corps after serving in the China-India-Burma theater of war. He is now associated with the Seagrave Corporation, Columbus.

The out of town guests at the ceremony included Mrs. John Riley, Mrs. Willis Green, and

OPA Office Warns Merchants Records Must Be Kept Up To Date

AGENCY IS STILL REQUIRED TO CHECK RECORDS

Some Duties Remain After Price Control Work Of OPA Expired

Storekeepers and other persons in Circleville and Pickaway county who were required under price control regulations to keep accurate records were warned Monday by the Cincinnati OPA district office to preserve their records until at least July 1, 1947.

Circleville and Pickaway county were in the Cincinnati district of the OPA. The order was declared effective on all retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers.

This action was taken, it was stated, to enable the OPA to carry on the duties directed to it under the executive order signed June 30 by President Truman.

The executive order provided that the OPA would continue all the functions vested in it by the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942 and the Stabilization Act of 1942 that did not terminate with the expiration of those acts on June 30.

This order assures — the OPA announcement declared — that "all records, books, accounts, invoices, sales lists, receipts and so on are required to be kept in keeping with its continued enforcement duties for violations committed before June 30, 1946."

The OPA announcement further says that "all regulations, orders, and price schedules shall be treated as remaining in force for the purpose of sustaining any action or prosecution with respect to offenses committed or liabilities incurred on or before June 30, 1946."

No one paid any attention to him as he took off his coat and draped it neatly over the five-foot ledge. Then he vaulted into space.

When horrified spectators peered over, they saw Vogel on the parapet only one floor below. He had broken his legs in the one-story fall. As they watched, he dragged himself painfully over the 30-inch ledge.

He plunged 750 feet to the 30th floor setback and became the only man ever to leap twice from the famed skyscraper.
